President Calls Out 'Black Coat Syndrome', Urges Supreme Court to Lead with Justice for All

Highlighting the delay in Justice, The President used this term to describe anxiety experienced by ordinary citizens in court settings.

➤ Term is analogous to the "White Coat Hypertension" i.e. increase in people's blood pressure in the hospital.

Reasons for such perception

➤ High pendency: As of August 31, 82,887 cases are pending in SC (National Judicial Data Grid).

⊕ Additionally, delays in deciding serious crimes like rape leads to public perception of insensitivity in the judicial system.

➤ Frequent adjournments: It causes great mental and financial pressure specially for people traveling from villages to courts.

➤ Issues with district judiciary: For instance, only 6.7% of court infrastructure at the district level is female friendly.

⊕ District-level courts significantly shape the public's perception of the judiciary.

Steps taken to address these issues

➤ Speed up efforts to modernise judiciary: through initiatives like e-Courts Integrated Mission Mode Project, Tele-Law programme, etc.

➤ Alternate modes of resolution: like pre-litigation dispute resolution such as Lok Adalat.

➤ Addressing infrastructure gaps: through scheme like Centrally Sponsored Scheme for Judicial Infrastructure.

➤ Reforming laws to reduce pendency: For Instance, SC recently applied Section 479 of Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita retrospectively to first-time offenders, making bail accessible to undertrials.

➤ Institutionalisation of pro bono culture (i.e. free services): through initiatives like Nyaya Bandhu programme.
